MUTTON FOR EVER!

Every mail from Europe now brings good River Plate mutton news. Our letters per Cotopaxi state that the River Plate mutton sells in London like bread and cheese, and definite arrangements have been made for one cargo per month by the Campana company. By another letter we learn that the machinery for two establishments similar to that of Campana are on the way out, and all the River Plate people in London and other parts of Europe believe that before the end of the present year all the Lamport and Holt, Allan line, Chargeurs Reunis, and French and English mail lines, and even the Mediterranean steamers, will be fitted up with the machinery and will load every trip mutton for the European makets. As our London Correspondent remarks, "you may send over all the millions of sheep you have in the Plate, and such is the consumption, that it will be but as a drop of water in the ocean."

Already this new trade is beginning to tell upon interests here. Lincoln sheep are being bought up right and left, and good outside camps, hard grass with 'cañadas,' are being purchased at advanced prices not on speculation, but for immediate stocking with Lincoln sheep and mestizo cattle. At Bullrich's auction sale the other day the Lincoln rams sold from 3 to 5000$ each, and our readers may rest assured that it is the news from Smithfield market, London, that crowded Bullrich's auction mart.

It appears that the Campana Company holds the monopoly of the Haslam patent which is always a check, but there are now so many patents akin that it is easy to suppose if the Lamport and Holt line cannot adopt the Haslam, they will assuredly adopt some other equally good. A French gentleman has arrived out here from Havre has gone out to the camp; we learn that he comes as agent for a company formed there for the importation of River Plate mutton and that his mission is to buy some 20 leagues of good well situated camps with a view to starting a sheep establishment with a very handsome capital.

The following is our own London correspondent's letter, received by the Cotopaxi. It will be read with much interest by all, as it shows the rapid march of our mutton in the London market.

London, Feb. 15th 1884.

I cannot say that the London press has taken up the question of "Fresh Meat from the River Plate" with much ardour or gratitude. The fact is we are so many of us here that we could eat up your whole ovine population in a few months, and if you were to rival New Zealand in sending us one million of mutton carcases, they would not keep us in mutton alone for a fortnight. We eat annually from 28 millions to 30 millions of sheep. So that Fresh Meat from the River Plate for a long time to come will to us be as a mere drop in the ocean, although it may be profitable to those concerned in the business; and it is to be hoped it will.

A small paragraph in one or two papers announced the fact that a luncheon had been given at the offices of the River Plate Frozen Meat Company, on Monday last, for the purpose of testing the mutton, ex "Meath," and the test seems to have been in the highest degree satisfactory. The "menu" was, of course, mutton throughout, such as mutton broth, stewed kidneys, sheep's tongue and trotters, braised mutton, boiled mutton, roast mutton, and mutton cutlets. All the dishes were pronounced to be excellent, and if the "Campana," as it is to be called, was not equal to the best English meat, it was acknowledged to be a thoroughly good substitute. Amongst the gentlemen present were Mr. G. W. Drabble—in the chair—the Argentine Minister Dr. Don Manuel Garcia, the Uruguayan Minister Colonel Carve, the Argentine Consul General, Señor A. de Guerrico, the Consul General for Uruguay Mr W. B. Cranwell, Mr John Fair, as representing the sheep-farming interest, Mr Gunther of the Liebig Factory, representing the saladero interest. Mr Haslam, engineer and inventor of the freezing process known by his name, Mr. Ellu, Mr Conning, Mr. Zimmermann, directors of the London and River Plate Bank, Mr. J. de Mancha, of the London and County Bank, Mr Russell Shaw, representing the Campana Railway, Mr. John Taylor, of the River Plate Trust and Loan Agency, Lord Reay, Mr. Herepath, Mr. Ross Duffield, Mr. Hughes Hughes, chairman of the Falkland Island Company etc. Speeches were made by Mr. Drabble, Dr Garcia and Colonel Carve as well as by other gentlemen present. Mr Drabble stated that the mutton that had been served had been out of the refrigerators for a week, and that it was a great mistake to suppose that it had to be sold immediately on arrival, and was in fact all the better for keeping.

The prices, 4d to 4¼d, I quoted as realised for the cargo of frozen meat, ex "Meath," are approximately correct; but it must be borne in mind that the market was heavily stocked with the article.

The heavy rains of the week appear to have extended over a wide area, and the D. H. Railway has broken down between the Cedofeita and Retiro stations, in addition to receiving damage of less importance in many other points. Passengers and parcels however, are still forwarded. At Morretes, Parana, part of the town and of the American colony had been inundated.

The term for reception of tenders for the gas lighting of Rio closed at three p.m. on the 28th of February, both here and abroad. The only tender put in here was one by Sr. Carlos Theodoro Bustamante, and the Jornal do Commercio has been informed that no proposals were received at the Brazilian Legations, in the United States, England, France and Austria, wherein, also, they could be received. The day is not yet fixed for the opening of the tender.

REV. F. N. LETT.

["During the yellow fever plague at Buenos Ayres the Rev. F. N. Lett was out Morning, noon and night, attending the sick, and never flinched a moment in all that terrible time." (Buenos Ayres Standard, Feb. 9.) The Rev. F. N. Lett was Chaplain at Rosario at the time of his death.]

When thousands died and thousands fled
And kindred ties were broken,
When mighty Death in triumph roamed
Through crowded streets forsaken—
In humble faith this godly man
Unflinching faced the dreaded one;
True servant of his Lord.

With tender care and gentle words,
Comfort and self-denying,
He sought the poor, the sick, the lost,
The stricken and the dying;
To brighter worlds he turned men's gaze
And murmurs changed to songs of praise;
True servant of his Lord.

And years had passed and scenes had changed,
And still God's flock he tended,
In church and school and household life;
But now all toil is ended.
He saith—by whom the work was blessed—
"Come Home; with me thou shalt find rest,
True servant of thy Lord."

LATEST FROM SALTA.

We publish some details forwarded by the Commander-in-Chief of the frontier of Salta, Col. Solá, of some engagements between the Indians and forces of 10th Regiment of Cavalry. They bear date Jan. 31st:—

I have the honour to inform Y.E. that the Indians who committed the outrages in the Algarrobal, of which I have already sent you account, were overtaken 4 leagues to the North of San Pablo on the 20th, by the forces dispatched under command of Major Bustamante.

The result of the fight was as follows: Twenty Indians killed; 10 taken prisoners; 26 horses taken of which 14 have been claimed, the rest still in our hands; also taken 24 sheep, besides some jewellery and documents which prove that they are the same Indians that attacken Dn. Santos King's house. Amongst the number of killed were distinguished Cacique Charabon and one of his sons, also a son of Cacique Moro Moro.

This time the savages have received a severe lesson, since besides the number of killed, which I estimate at 40, in all the wounded must number 70 at least.

From the place called the "Cabeza del Caballo" up to the points marked lower down, comprising an extent of 20 square leagues, the Indians have not attacked since the moon changed.

Not a single animal have they been able to rob, since all have been retaken; it is uncertain that they carried off the 5000 head of cattle from 9 puestos, as I recounted in a former dispatch. Only 140 were killed in Sr. Maza's corral.

In Gorriti I have 1500 Indians collected, in consequence of an order I gave to the commander of the fort there, Sr. Fernandez, to make known to the chiefs that all not presenting themselves would be considered enemies.

Y.E. will allow me to comply with a duty in recommending to your consideration the officers engaged in these successes. Sergeant Major Bustamante, Brevet Major Moscoso, Lieutenant Carbia and Ensign Ripoll, all of whom have displayed intelligence, zeal and bravery.

I must also make mention of the conduct of the soldiers of the Regiment.

SOUDAN REBELLION.

ANOTHER DISASTER.

DEFEAT OF BAKER PACHA.

GREAT SLAUGHTER.

CONSTERNATION AT CAIRO.

Suakim, Tuesday.

Yesterday our army suffered a disgraceful defeat by an inferior force of the enemy, and the most unfavourable opinions which had been formed of the utterly untrustworthy nature of Baker Pacha's troops have been terribly verified.

Upon the evening of the 3rd. inst. our force, three thousand six hundred strong, encamped two miles from Trinkatat, the ground having been carefully chosen, and a vigilant watch being kept up all night against surprise. A few shots were from time to time fired into us, but otherwise the night passed quietly. The troops were paraded before daybreak, and at half-past seven the three hundred baggage camels were laden and ready to move forward. The guns moved in advance of the column, the infantry following them, and the greater part of the cavalry were scattered round in a circle of skirmishers, a half-mile or so from the column, thus effectively protecting it from any sudden attack. The Turkish cavalry were in reserve.

The country was open, but scattered here and there were patches of scrub and thorn, mimosa and other prickly shrubs, which should be at least as impenetrable for naked savages as for well-clad men. The scrub grew thicker as we advanced, but the ground was still open enough for the operations of cavalry.

Shortly after eight o'clock parties of the enemy were sighted. These retired slowly upon the approach of our cavalry skirmishers, but showed more and more thickly as we advanced. At half-past eight the column halted. A Krupp gun was brought forward and unlimbered, and a few rounds of shell were fired. It was hardly to be expected that any execution would be done upon the scattered parties of the enemy, but the effect was to cause them again to fall back.

The morning was dull, with heavy showers, and just at this time a rain storm burst upon us and greatly obscured our view of the country in front. This was an advantage for the enemy, who probably regarded it as an interposition of God in their favour, and they now gathered thickly and advanced towards us, and at nine o'clock showed in considerable force on some slightly-rising ground, near the water springs, whilst on our left front I could see clumps of spears with bannerets partially concealed amidst the hillocks and bushes.

Our guns again opened fire; but the shell seemed to me to pass over the enemy's heads. The force was now ordered to advance; but as soon as they got into movement the clumps of spears were no longer to be seen. When our cavalry skirmishers, however, reached the spot they were soon hotly engaged, and could be seen firing wildly in all directions from the saddle.

Presently about a dozen Arabs, riding barebacked on wiry little horses, appeared from behind a hillock, and coolly galloped round our right flank, within three hundred yards of our cavalry on that side, running the gauntlet of the latter's fire. They passed scatheless, and as they still kept along parallel to our column, with the evident intention of gauging its strength and disposition, the General ordered the Turkish Cavalry to charge them and cut them off. After a hot chase the enemy escaped, but as the Turks rode back again towards the column they again appeared, and this time galloped across our front, and round to the left.

Whilst our attention was distracted from the front by this incident, a sudden commotion arose in the midst of our cavalry skirmishers on our left flank. The enemy must for some time have been lying concealed close to them, and they now sprang to their feet, and with wild cries charged the Egyptian horsemen. These at once turned rein, and came galloping in in a wild and very disorderly fashion.

Just before this I had ridden along by the infantry column, and saw that it was advancing in the most disorderly manner. There was no sign of discipline or of steadiness; it was a mere armed mob tramping along. I at once determined that if the enemy attacked I would not trust myself among them, for I was convinced that they would break at the first charge. To this resolve I probably owe my life. As the cavalry rode wildly in, the order was given for the infantry to form square—a manœuvre in which they had been daily drilled for weeks. At this crisis, however, the but half-disciplined mass failed to accomplish it. Three sides were formed after a fashion, but on the fourth side two companies of the Alexandria Regiment, seeing the enemy coming on leaping and brandishing their spears, stood like a panic-stricken flock of sheep, and nothing could get them to move into their place.

Into the gap thus left in the square the enemy hotly poured, and at once all became panic and confusion. The troops fired indeed, but for the most part straight into the air. The miserable Egyptian soldiers refused even to defend themselves, but, throwing away their rifles, flung themselves on the ground, and grovelled there, screaming for mercy. No mercy was given, the Arab spearmen pouncing upon them and driving their spears through their necks or bodies. Nothing could well surpass the wild confusion which the mass presented—camels and guns mixed up together, soldiers firing in the air, with wild Arabs, their long hair streaming behind them, darting among them hacking and thrusting with their spears.

The right side of the square was not at first assailed, but kept up a continuous fire towards their front, which killed many of our cavalry. The Turks lost several men by their fire, two being killed close beside me.

When the charge had been made by the enemy on the left flank, General Baker with his Staff were out with the cavalry in front. Upon riding back they found that the enemy had already got between them and the column. They at once charged them and cut their way through, but not without several being killed, amongst them Abdul Rusac, the chief Egyptian Staff officer. His horse was hamstrung, and as it fell he was instantly speared by the Arabs. On nearing the square the General had to run the gauntlet of the fire of the Egyptians in front, who, regardless of what was going on around them, were blazing away in their front. When the General reached the square the enemy had already broken it up, and it was clear that all was lost.

General Sartorius with his Staff had been in the inside of the square when the enemy burst into it. They in vain tried to rally the panic-stricken Egyptians, and were so closely cooped in by the huddled mass of soldiers that, for a time, they were unable to extricate themselves. When, at last, the Arab spearmen had thinned the throng of Egyptians, they succeeded in breaking out and in cutting their way through the enemy.

It now became a total rout, the shattered column streaming across the plain towards Trinkitat preceded by the flying cavalry, the enemy pressing hotly on the rere of the infantry, and slaughtering at will. All mounted men unable to ride well were dismounted by the rush of the flying horsemen and killed. When last seen, Dr Leslie, Morris Bey, and Captain Walker, with drawn swords and pistols, were standing in a group surrounded by the enemy, close to the guns, in the front face of the square. There also the Turkish Battalion and 36 Italian policemen were annihilated, scarcely one escaping.

So for five miles the flight and pursuit were kept up. The Massowah black battalion behaved well, and for a portion of the distance retired steadily, firing volleys into the enemy. Zobeir's blacks were undrilled and hardly able to fire their rifles, not having arrived long enough before the advance to enable the officers to get them into any shape. They, therefore, bolted as promptly as did the Egyptians.

When the earthwork was reached where we had encamped the night before, the General made great efforts to protect the rear of the flying fugitives by a charge of the Turkish Cavalry, with a few Egyptian horsemen, but nothing could induce them to charge. Half a regiment of Indian cavalry would have swept the plain of the scattered enemy with the greatest ease. However, although the General could not induce the Turks to charge, he got them to form in line at the earthwork, and to halt facing the enemy. The pursuit then ceased, the enemy doubtless being afraid of the fire from the ships, but in fact no gunboat was in the harbour, the Admiral having ordered away the Decoy on the previous day.

When the pursuit ended, the weary fugitives, horse and foot, with many riderless horses here and there among them, made their way across the two intervening miles of deep mud to Trinkatat. On reaching the shore they would have crowded into the few boats there and swamped them, had not the English officers, revolver in hand, kept them back. Then they stood huddled together on the beach like a flock of sheep, and had the enemy come on, the whole would have been butchered as easily and with as little resistance as so many sheep might have been.

Gradually, as it was found that the enemy had really ceased in their pursuit, the panic subsided. All night long the work of embarkation continued. The General, the European officers, and the crews of the English ships working unceasingly in getting on board the men, horses and baggage. Not one Egyptian officer lent his aid to keep order or to help in the work of embarkation.

By morning all were on board, and we were then able to see what the loss really was. Of the English officers, Morris Bey, Dr. Leslie, Captains Forrester, Walker, Carrol, Smith and Watkins (the last named having only joined the day before), are missing; also some ten other foreign officers. Colonel Hay, Majors Harvey and Giles, with Bewley and Burnaby, are safe. Melton Prior, the special artist, was, fortunately, owing to an accident, in hospital, and did not accompany the force.

The four guns and the two Gatlings are lost, and so sudden and rapid was the enemy's onset that the guns and Gatlings could fire but one round, the Egyptian gunners then bolting instantly. The whole of the baggage was lost. The number of those who have escaped is officially estimated at fifteen hundred, but I think that it will be found larger; for, if the Egyptians cannot fight, they can certainly run. Still, the loss cannot be much under 2,000 men.

The loss of the enemy must have been very small in comparison. A good many fell before the revolvers and swords of the European officers, and the Turkish battalion and Italians made a stout fight, and killed a good many of their assailants before they were overpowered. Still, the total must be small indeed in comparison with the loss we have suffered. Many very gallant actions were done by the European officers who were all engaged in hand-to-hand struggles with the enemy's spearmen. Major Harvey saved his European servant when exhausted in the flight by placing him on his horse and running himself on foot beside it.

The enemy betrayed the most profound contempt for our troops, and clearly regarded themselves as invincible. One man would fall upon a score of Egyptian infantry, and a mounted Arab rode single-handed at a troop of our cavalry. He slashed on the back and severely wounded the Egyptian commander, who was too frightened even to attempt to defend himself; but was at last shot by an English officer.

After yesterday's experience no one here will ever trust themselves in action again with Egyptian troops, except, indeed, with bodies of well-drilled blacks, who under such circumstances only can be relied upon. The enemy had not three thousand men in the field, but it must be owned that these came on with all the pluck and gallantry of the Moslem of old. Those of us who saw their long line charge down through the scrub at a steady pace, after uttering a wild whoop, will not soon forget the sight.

The effects of this crushing defeat will be wide and deep. My telegrams have shown that I have all along anticipated disaster, and few officers had any faith in the courage of the troops. Baker Pacha had, however, but one course to pursue. Knowing the extremity of the distress of the besieged town, and that between him and Tokar was a force not exceeding his own in strength, he was bound to make an effort to deliver it. We now know that with such troops victory was utterly impossible. But their utter badness could not be assumed until it was proved.

Neither Baker Pacha or his officers are to be blamed; they made immense exertions to get the force into a condition to fight, and they themselves fought with splendid courage. They could do no more. Not upon them is the blame for their defeat, and for the massacres which must now take place at Siukat and Tokar, but on those who withheld the English battalions lying idle at Cairo and Alexandria, when but one of them might have enabled Baker to rescue the beleaguered garrisons.

The fate of those places is now sealed, and it is not improbable that Suakim itself will be shortly attacked. The General, with the remnants of his army on board five ships, is now entering the harbour. All the men and horses and most of the stores landed at Trinkatat have been brought off, and everything remaining burnt. The Admiral landed one hundred and sixty men from the Fleet this evening to aid in case the town is attacked.

This action settles the question of the Eastern Soudan. It is ridiculous to suppose that such men as the Egyptians can rule over a race like the Arabs of their country, who are in every respect, but supremely in point of courage, their superiors. The Arab leader yesterday handled his men with consummate ability; but had he allowed us to penetrate to Tokar and then barred our return, probably not a single man in the Anglo-Egyptian Army would have escaped to tell the tale.

The Fellaheen element must, at any rate, be in future altogether abolished in the Egyptian Army, for it is much worse than useless. The men on board the ships who have just come up are better pleased at the prospect of being sent home again than if they had won a great victory, and feel no disgrace whatever at their defeat. It is hopeless to try to do anything with such men as these, and if Egypt is not to fall a prey to the Mahdi, it is not to its Fellaheen soldiers that it must look to protect it.

Cairo, Tuesday Night.

Sir Evelyn Baring has to-day received a telegram stating that Baker Pacha has been defeated, with the loss of two thousand men. There are no details as yet.

The news has naturally created the greatest consternation.

Immediately on its reception General Sir E. Wood and Nubar Pacha repaired to Sir E. Baring's house. I left Nubar still there.

It is now considered beyond question that English troops will have to be sent, and much anxiety is felt as to the probable fate of General Gordon.

Morris Bey was an English major of Marines in charge of the Coastguard. He volunteered to act as paymaster of Baker Pacha's force. He rendered considerable service during the Egyptian campaign, having been attached to General Wolseley's Staff as the Khedive's Aide-de-Camp. He reconnoitred the ground before Tel-el-Kebir. The deceased was a popular and energetic officer, and had a large circle of friends in Alexandria. He was brother to Morris Pacha, a captain in the Royal Navy. Leslie was a doctor, well known in the Russo-Turkish war. Carroll was an ex-sergeant in the English Army.

When the news of the defeat and heavy loss became known in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, through a telegram received by the Government from their agents, it formed the subject of general conversation and inquiry in the lobby, where apprehensions were expressed as to the possible effect of Baker's defeat upon General Gordon's mission and the relief of the garrison of Khartoum. On the members of the Government receiving the telegram they handed it across the table to Sir Stafford Northcote, who showed it to several of his colleagues on the front Opposition bench. Summonses were at once issued convening a meeting of the Cabinet to-day in Downing-street to consider this latest phase of Egyption affairs.

LONDON LETTER.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Feb. 15th, 1884.

In London society the great topic of the day is the breach of promise case, Miss Finney—alias Fortescue v Lord Garmoyle. It was generally supposed that the matter would be arranged privately, but it appears that Miss Fortescue has been induced by her dramatic friends to ask an exorbitant recompense. Lord Cairns thought the matter could be compromised for two or three thousand pounds, but Miss Fortescue claims £50,000 damages. The dramatic and town world is delighted at the idea of making the young man pay for his short whistle behind the scenes, and it is known that heavy damages will go deeper into the pious souls of the North Irish parents than even the discredit of the alliance of the noble and godly house of Cairns with an actress. The society papers take a delight in parading the fact that, as a question of birth, Miss Finney is quite the equal of Lord Garmoyle, whose grandfather was in trade and whose great-grandfather was a butcher or something very horrible. The excuse given by the Cairns family for inducing the son to break off the match, is that, on the authority of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, himself the descendant of a French inconnue, Miss Fortescue as Lady Garmoyle would not be received at Court. With people in the position of the Cairns, who have acquired a political as well as social rank, the objection is, of course, very serious, but all that should have been thought of before the young lady was formally admitted into the house of Lord Cairns as a fiancée, and her hopes encouraged and her affections blighted. I do not think that either the young lady's hopes or affections can be valued at £50,000, but no one will sympathize with Lord Garmoyle whatever he may have to pay, and however ridiculous his love letters may appear in Court; and one good thing may come of it, it may induce an ex-Lord Chancellor to join the present Solicitor-General in abolishing actions for breach of promise. It is stated by "Life" which appears yesterday, that the plain truth of the matter is that Lady Cairns' medical adviser informed Lord Garmoyle that if the wedding took place, "it would kill his mother." The same authority adds, that the evening after the engagement was broken off, "the broken-hearted youth appeared in a box at the "Gaiety" at the first representation of "Camarabyaman," without his betrothed. Lord Garmoyle it is thought will retire from Sandhurst and go abroad—in fact, he is gone. The father of the present Lady Cairns was agent for the Irish property of a well-known English landowner. In his visits to England he fell in love with the eldest daughter of the house, but on opening his heart to the young lady's mamma, he was shown the door. The same authority just quoted announces the coming of a matrimonial cause célebre, the extraordinary and dramatic incidents of which will throw the Fortescue case and all others into the shade.

The Standard says:—

"... the action brought by Miss Fortescue against Lord Garmoyle for breach of promise of marriage an appearance on behalf of the defendant was entered to the writ at the Royal Courts of Justice yesterday. The next stage in the proceedings will be the delivery of the plaintiff's statement of claim. It is stated that the plaintiff insists upon explaining in open court the circumstances under which the engagement was broken off. The amount of damages claimed is £30,000. Until the action has been tried Miss Fortescue does not intend to return to the stage."

You will see the death of Mr. Chenery, the Editor of the Times. He died at his chambers in Seargent's Inn after a short and painful illness caused by abcess in the stomach, for which he submitted to an operation that was at first thought to be successful, but the patient gradually sank. Mr. Chenery was born in Barbadoes in 1826, and up to quite lately was full of energy and engrossed in his laborious and responsible duties. He was educated at Eton and took his degree of M.A., at one of the Universities. He is represented to have been a fair classical scholar, a thorough master of modern languages and a great Oriental scholar. That he was well adapted for his position on the leading journal may be doubted. Between him and the proprietors the Times has lately lost all lead, although there has been a great improvement within the last few weeks. It is usual to speak of dead men in fulsome terms, an error partially corrected by Mr. Froude in his biography of Carlyle. The mere sympathetic feeling of the living for the memory of the dead is tolerable and even proper in private life, but when it is a question of history or of public men, to succumb to vulgar feeling on the subject is maudlin and puling. Mr. Chenery is said to have been all that is good and kind and no one who professed to know that his temper was the vilest that ever man had—a temper intolerable even to his equals; and as for his subordinates, the recent typographical errors in the Times are monuments to the memory of poor Chenery's little failing. The appointment of his successor is a matter of great interest to the world in general, for unquestionably the Times is still by many an arrow-flight above all its competitors.

The late Zulu King, Cetewayo seems to have died from fatty degeneration of the heart. He weighed 20 stone. Not extraordinary, since Mr. Whitley the great draper in Westbourne Grove, who attended to the wants of His Zulu Majesty when in England, tells us that when he arrived he used to manage 4 to 5 lbs of beefsteak during the day, but with appetite improved by English air the quantity soon rose to 7½ lbs per diem, exclusive of a few other dishes, and a fair amount of liquor, chiefly champagne and whiskey. Cetewayo was not long ill. When in his hut at Gkowe he suddenly complained of malaise. He laid down on his bed and his people thinking he was in a fainting fit, poured water over him. He never got up. Miss Colenso says, he died of a broken heart. His death, apparently this time certain, releases the Government from one of its petty difficulties. Apart from complexions he was a white elephant, and now poor Cetewayo is gone, his country will be a plague to us, and will, after all, be very likely annexed. Meantime the Boers are annexing it by placing their rifles at the disposal of native chiefs for a consideration in lands.

In the proceedings for libel Vallambrosa v. Labouchere the Lord Chief Justice, has given judgment in favour of the defendent on the plea that although the libel was untrue and unjustifiable, the present Duke of Vallambrosa could not institute an action for libel against his father who is dead. Truth stated that the previous duke was an army contractor who narrowly escaped hanging for supplying the French Army with foul meat, and that with the proceeds of his villiany he purchased an Italian title. It appears that the title is hereditary.

A sad mishap has occurred to Lord Tennyson. His lordship was to have made his first appearance in the House of Peers, as is usual on such occasions and at the opening of Parliament in full Baronial robes. The parcel containing the robes arrived from his lordship's tailor's safely enough, and no doubt, his lordship tried to his own satisfaction the full effect of the garments in a private rehearsal before the glass and the assembled newly enobled family. Alas! the robes were again made into a parcel and sent to the House of Peers to await his lordship's arrival. His lordship did arrive; but the parcel did not; and nothing has been heard of the robes since, in spite of diligent inquiries on the part of the police.

Mr. Bradlaugh managed his last ceremony of oath-taking very quietly. He gave no trouble to the police, and outside the House there was no demonstration. Inside, the only disturbance was made by the yelling of the Conservative pack after Mr. Bradlaugh had sneaked up to the table and kissed the book, and when Mr. Labouchere offended their religious feeling—particularly Lord Randolph's—when he spoke of oaths as mumbo-jumbo rubbish. The usual farce of voting Mr. Bradlaugh out was gone through with the resulting immense majority in favour of the motion. In the interval Mr. Bradlaugh managed to vote on three separate divisions, for which he is personally liable to the extent of £500 each, which penalty the Attorney-General threatens to exact; but the Government allowed him to accept the Chiltern Hundreds, and it is now doubtful according to the Law Journal whether they can judiciously bring their action. Meantime Mr. B. has issued his address to his Northampton constituents offering himself for re-election.

I must find room for the latest news from Ireland. The pious Gladstone Government not satisfied with running the gauntlet through dagger and blunderbuss, dynamite, Parnellites and Orangemen, has now chosen to incur the additional danger of surreptitiously administered jalap. The whole of the medical staff at Dublin Castle threaten to resign, because Lord Spencer or Lady Spencer or somebody has said that the medical men themselves may be tolerated, but their wives are impossible and it has been decreed that these bodies are not on any account to remain in the throne room with Lady Spencer and the wives of other and higher officials at the Castle receptions.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

The thrilling account, in another column, of the disastrous defeat of Baker Pacha is of melancholy interest. It was a cruel shame to send gallant English officers in command of such miserable, cringing cowards. The Paris Correspondents say that the French are delighted: "Ils ont attrapés une bonne raclée" (lathering) is the saying in all the Paris Clubs. In England people are thoroughly disgusted at all the blundering, and a "brandy and water" policy at Khartoum is credited with much of the mischief. One thing is pretty certain now—there must be a British Protectorate in, and, finally, annexation of Egypt.

We have the following from London about Her Majesty's new book, copious extracts from which we hold for early publication:—

"The reports in circulation concerning the dedication of the Queen's new book are not quite accurate. The following is the exact wording of the dedication:—

To MY LOYAL HIGHLANDERS, and Especially to the Memory of My devoted Personal Attendant and Faithful Friend,
JOHN BROWN,
These Records of my Widow Life
In Scotland
are Gratefully Dedicated,
VICTORIA, R.I.

"A French edition will be published directly after the appearance of the original. The translation is to be executed by Mdme. Marie Drousart.

"We hear that the booksellers and libraries have subscribed largely for the volume, and believe that the first edition will number some 10,000 copies. As an interesting fact, it may be mentioned that some 30,000 copies of the original edition of "Leaves from the Highlands" were sold."

The Annual Picnic and Athletic Sports of the employees of the Southern Railway take place at Lanus on Tuesday the 25th inst, the Circo de Santa Teresa having been kindly lent to them by Mr Edward Casey. The meeting this year, we understand, promises to be on a very large scale, and the competition for the handsome challenge cup, which will be the principal event on the card, is exciting a large amount of interest among the youthful athletes, consequently a race of more than usual merit is anticipated. As usual, a special train will take the employees and their friends to the scene of operations, and with the assistance of capital music and a well managed refreshment department, a pleasant day's outing may be counted upon—if it does not rain.

President Roca arrived yesterday morning. There was no fuss or ceremony. To-morrow President Roca will officially receive the new Brazilian Minister, Councillor Alencar.

Letters have been received from the Naval School boys and their officer who went to Europe in the Nord America, to bring out from Trieste a new ship built there for the Argentine navy. At first they were all woefully sea sick, but soon got their sea legs so far that they managed to remain on deck when the sea was "regularmente gruesa." We hope they will have fine weather on the way out, as otherwise, even this remarkable nautical feat of remaining on deck in half a gale of wind wont save the ship entrusted to their care.

The last official report of the city health says that typhoid fever has assumed something unpleasantly like an epidemic form. Everybody's stomach is out of order from eating too much fruit and ices.

The papers publish bad news from the Gran Chaco. An exploring party of the Marine Battalion under Lieuts. Godoy and Rivas was sent to reconnoitre the ground for the Minister of War's expedition next month. After two days' march water ran short, and all the wells they dug were useless, as the water was not drinkable. The mosquitoes and insects of all kinds drove the poor soldiers half mad, and they finally disbanded, to make their way back. Some of them reached the camp; but nothing has been heard of Lieut. Rivas, a mere boy, and it is feared he has either perished from thirst or been killed by the Indians. A Captain and twenty men went to look for him, but his men dispersed like the others and returned in a sorry plight. Another party will be sent out to look for the poor young officer.

The Rev. Dr Smith returned from Colonia on Monday. He held divine Service on Sunday in the corridor at the Estanzuela, and there was a very large attendance. Mr. Maltby received his numerous guests with his usual hospitality, and his mother and sister took excellent care of the ladies, and conducted the Service of Praise most admirably. Great sympathy was expressed for Mr. and Mrs Allen on the death of their daughter, who was a general favourite with the congregation, and used to play the harmonium for the choir.

Mr. Amicis' hotel bill is not to be paid after all. The Corporators will go and receive him at the Mole, the Lord Mayor will lend him his carriage all the time he is here, and the Municipality will give him a feed. The question is, does Mr Amicis speak Spanish? We suppose not.

Mr. Enrique Hundius, Accountant of the Carabassa Bank, died suddenly yesterday morning. He was a very popular gentleman, and his death will be widely regretted.

Who has it? Number 9904 won the 50,000 pats. prize in the Montevideo Lottery yesterday, and the 5,000 pats. prize fell to 9376.

The Circus Company, at present working in the Politeama, has decided to have a Gala Performance every Thursday; the first will take place this evening, and the programme contains several novelties and is highly attract WONDERFUL CURES OF CONSUMPTION.—Recent dissections in the hospitals of Paris, prove that tubercles in the lungs may be permanently healed, and consumption cured. The cases referred to were those of person we had been treated years ago for lungs diseases. They were cured of ulceration of the lungs," say the official reports, by "the official reports, by the persistent use of Pure Cod-Liver Oil."

The great difficulty, however, is to obtain that invaluable specific. It is therefore a matter of the highest interest to the sick to know that Lanman & Kemp's Pure Medicinal Cod-Liver Oil is, as its name indicates, entirely free from impurity. It is the healing, life-preserving principle of the sound livers of codfish fresh from the sea. Not a particle of extraneous matter enters into its composition. It is clear, and entirely free from the rancidity which generally characterizes what are called Cod-Liver Oils. The name of the firm by whom it is prepared is a guarantee of its excellence that the trade, as well as the public, may rely upon with confidence, and hence it is kept by all first-class druggist.

Cedulas B	99⅝
Cedulas E	88⅞
Cedulas D	99⅝
Cedulas F	84
National Bank Shares....	126½
National Bank Scrip.....	125

Spite of the great heat there was a good stir in stocks to-day, and some Series of Cedulas rarely offered, B and D, were sold at 99⅝. The sales of all these stocks may be accepted as proof of the tightness of the money market. These stocks are 8 o/o and are now selling under par.

The stock market is certainly more lively, and there seems to be a better feeling We know nothing positive about the loans, but it is whispered that there is some very important news stirring, and that the Minister of Hacienda, Dr. Plaza, is about to turn over a new leaf, which will greatly tend to improve and facilitate Argentine credit abroad.

The Provincial Bank was crowded to-day with friends congratulating Mr. Marenco on his great luck in drawing the big prize of 10,000 patacons in the Mendoza Lottery; all the Bolsa now buys tickets in this lottery.

The following were the sales at the ring during official hours:—

Cedulas—
For cash A 5,000 at 100½
For cash E 36,000 at 88⅛
For March. 31st E 95,000 at 88½ ⅜-½
For cash B 3,800 at 99⅝
For cash D 1,400 at 99⅝
For cash F 16,000 at 84
Sales, 157,200

National Bank Shares—
For March 31st 100 at 126½
For April 30th 150 at 127⅜-½
Sales, 250

It was freely said on 'Change to-day that the mails from the Interior have brought large remittances to the National Bank, Chilian Bills on London to pay for cattle bought at Mendoza. The amount of these remittances is put at £50,000 which seems a very large sum but such was the news current.

The sale of 100 National Bank certificados at 25 o/o premium on 30 per cent paid up is reported. This premium so soon after the dividend is somewhat more than 40 per cent premium paid before the dividend and call paid up.

Advices from Venado Tuerto and Loreto are most favourable, camps in splendid condition. Mr Garraghan is wire fencing and stocking the land which he bought last year from Mr E. Murphy at $500,000 m/c per league. Mr Edward Dillon of 25 de Mayo moves out this week with 300 milch cows and 4000 sheep to his new land up there which he bought a couple of months ago for $300,00 % per league and Mr Hubert Rourke Juez de Paz of Baradero is also sending his stock to his new estancia there which also cost $300,000 m/c per league. Soon all these fine lands will be as stocked as Areco.

To-day President Roca arrived back from the Interior At his house this morning there was a regular levee of friends and Mr Thomas Drysdle who leaves on 15th. called on the President to bid him good bye and to ask H. E. for a site on the Government's grounds at Palermo for his Institute for the Blind, which President Roca at once promised him, requesting him to apply to the Minister de Culto, Dr Wild, to have the papers made out. We congratulate Mr. Drysdale on the great success of his noble efforts for the poor blind; not only has he given 20,000 pats to found this Institution but by his persistent efforts he has now obtained a fine site for his blind Asylum.

The heat to-day was worse than ever. People walked about the hall fanning themselves just as if they were in India. Never before was such heat known in March in this country, and all the excessive perspiration of the ring is attributed to the ashes from Java which are supposed to be above and to tinge the sunsets, which for beauty and gorgeous brilliancy completely eclipse any seen in Europe.

There was no fresh news stirring to-day about the loans which is indeed a wonder as almost every day we have some new version We believe a new general Bond for the National Bank loan has been signed in Europe which of course settlers that matter, as the syndicate has received a letter from the Minister requesting that there be no further delay in the business.

The news on 'Change in the afternoon was that all the exchange in the market had been taken up, and no one knew the taker; some said it was one of the Banks. Drawers state that takers for large bills of £40 and £50,000 were offering. As a matter of course the rate is down—

Paris, 5.01
Antwerp, 5.02
London, 47 9/16
Marks, 4.05

Mr. Williamson, who has arrived from Tandil, was welcomed on 'Change; he reports everything flourishing in the charming South.

Some Old Bolsa Shares offering, not sold yet.

At afterhours the following business done—
50 Argentine Gas Shares, 120
200,000 Series E, 88⅛
100 Old Gas Shares, 1,680
200 National Bank Shares, 126½
National Bank Certificates buyers offering, no sales.

Mr. Portalis they say leaves for France and takes 1½ millions Cedulas for the Paris Market. This of course has put new life into the stock.

EDITOR'S TABLE

Things are beginning to look rather rummy in the camp, owing to the prolonged drought. The Western camps are so dry in many places that the farmers say they will barely be able to hold on for ten days longer without moving their sheep.

Messrs. Laserre & Co. propose to establish refrigerators in the markets, to keep meat, fish, fruit etc. sound and fresh. The idea is a good one, as a good deal of meat has to be thrown out daily, especially during this hot weather.

Mr James Garibaldi was robbed of six National dollars the other night, through going out for a lark and leaving his "diggings" without any person to look after it during his absence. James made as much row about his six Nats. at the Comisaria as if he had lost 600,000.

The heat was insufferable yesterday, and not the remotest sign of rain. The Standard barometer has retired from business owing to the intense heat, so we are unable to say when it will rain.

An English family who lately came here started for the Southern camps yesterday to play Punch and Judy and other things to amuse the sheepfarmers. The idea is not a bad one, and our strolling friends will probably put some money in their purses. The Western and North camps would be a better field, as they would find more countrymen in that direction.

The City Fathers are thinking of starting a Savings Bank and Pawn Office of their own. Whoever goes often to the P. O. won't have much left to put into the S. B.

Mr. Marenco, the popular Inspector of the Provincial Bank, won the whole big prize in the Lottery on Tuesday. Standard luck. Felicitaciones, Don Mariano. More luck to you!

We much regret to hear that the Venerable Dean Monsignor Dillon is not making that progress towards recovery which his friends hoped for. He is suffering from an abcess in his side, which prevents his lying in bed, and he has to sleep in an armchair. We hope the next accounts will be better.

A red mirage was seen at Palermo on Tuesday evening. A fire appeared to be blazing away in the middle of the river, and it was subsequently known that it was the reflection of some bales of hay that were burned accidentally in the neighbourhood. The mirage in these latitudes is a pretty certain sign of rain, so panting humanity may look out for a change at last.

The Ilustracion Argentina has a picture of Lamothe's chalet at the Tigre, and gives a glowing description of the abode where High Life used to disport itself, little dreaming where the cash for all the fun came from.

The "attorantes" have now taken to congregate under the passenger pier. The Capitania people do not know how to get rid of them.

A prodigious rumpus was caused in Calle Corrientes about 9 p.m. on Tuesday evening, owing to a false alarm of fire in Mr Cano's Model Lodging-house, opposite the Opera House. The Fire Brigade came up, but when they arrived it was found that the whole thing was either a lark or a mistake.

Our colleagues all report the massacre, defeat, etc., of English troops in the Soudan. This is all stuff. Up to the present, the defeated troops have been the cowardly Egyptians. No doubt, General Graham and his 5,000 men will give Mr. Osman Digna and his ferocious tribes a dig in the ribs that will speedily put an end to their goings on.
